MISSION FOCUS: Duty to Intervene

The more realistic the training the more effective the results. That's why MILO Range supports a host of system features that you can use to simulate virtually any scenario.

Building on the ABLE (Active Bystander for Law Enforcement) Project, the MILO Range Mission Specific Training System creates opportunities for officers to practice overcoming the brain's instinct for freeze, flight, and fight in situations where peer intervention is critical. By building these skills and learning to override the neurophysiological responses hardwired in the human brain for our own protection, MILO equips professionals within the law enforcement community with the tools they need to question decisions, speak up, and challenge behaviors more frequently and tactically—on behalf of themselves and others.

Available on all MILO Range systems.

"Intervention takes courage. Intervention takes effort. Intervention is hard. But Intervention is necessary because failing to intervene undermines the integrity of our law enforcement officers everywhere. The MILO approach is grounded in the principles of NLI's brain science, which will support more effective community-oriented policing—this is good for police and good for communities."
